Chemical Stockpile Emergency Preparedness Program

CSEPP Hotline is the interactive communication system of the Chemical Stockpile Emergency Preparedness Program's (CSEPP) Public Affairs Community.

CSEPP Hotline is designed to support cyber Joint Information System activities in the event of a real emergency at any of the chemical stockpile installations, facilitate sharing of information and products among the CSEPP communities and provide a program-wide communications tool for emergency preparedness training in exercises.

Once you're connected, you can:

- Interact and collaborate live using CSEPP Hotline's real-time chat capabilities – in General Chat (anyone logged on) or one of the other chat rooms (password restricted for select groups). Use the chat rooms to discuss, conference, conduct cyber meetings, critique documents or just say hello.
- Send alerts about events in your community, exchange information, query fellow public affairs and information officers and make suggestions on the CSEPP message board.
- Post news articles, news releases, outreach products, program materials, lessons-learned or anything else relevant to CSEPP so that everyone stays informed and can take advantage of public education and information activities and products from other communities.

- Upload files of any format you want to share. Reduce the need to send e-mails with large attachments by uploading material to the uploads section of CSEPP Hotline.

- Browse In The News, What's New, Outreach Stuff You Can Use and other topic areas to see what's happening in other CSEPP communities and program-wide.

CSEPP Hotline is password protected

To obtain a password, you must register as a CSEPP Hotline user.

To register, please e-mail the following information to hotline@anl.gov: your name, title and association with the CSEP Program, a valid e-mail address, work address and phone number. In the subject line, type "Hotline Password." When approved, you will receive a password via e-mail within 48 hours.
